

Trainer Profile

Patrick McDonald

Nationality: United States

Languages: English

Patrick moved to China in 1998 and joined the ClarkMorgan team in 2004. This makes him one of ClarkMorgan's most experienced and qualified China-centric trainers.

His trainings are illustrated with stories and anecdotes from his past experience that bring the interaction alive for his trainees, while also tailoring the training to the specific needs of the trainees and company.

Patrick holds an MBA specialising in International Business and a Project Management Professional (PMP) certification from the Project Management Institute. He studied cultural anthropology and East Asian Studies from Loyola University – Chicago.

Presentation Skills Expert

Patrick has given presentations to groups as small as two to over 500, from new graduates to senior executives in China. The growth of presentations as a means of career development and enhancing persuasion and commitment are one of his main focuses. In recent years, Patrick has publicly presented or was the Master of Ceremonies to international audiences in throughout China on the following topics:

- How Do You x10 Your Organization?
- How Do You Build Engagement in Your Organization?
- Project Management for New Project Managers.
- Improving Your Presentation Skills.
