

Trainer Profile

Patrick McDonald

Nationality: United States

Languages: English

Pat McDonald has leveraged his communications skills to foster understanding, reduce ambiguity, and minimize assumptions. He first moved to China in 1998 and has had extensive experience communicating both within and across cultural borders utilizing a multitude of methods.

Throughout his varied career, he's held positions in the service, retail, transportation, energy, IT, education, consulting and training fields, each with its own specific communication needs.

He holds an MBA specializing in International Business and a Project Management Professional (PMP) certification from the Project Management institute.

Business Writing Skills Expert

Patrick is the Operations Director for ClarkMorgan. His stress and focus has always been the increases in productivity and performance through the encouragement and structure of continuous improvement and sharing of ideas. In an era of distributed, international teams, effective and efficient written communication is essential.

Patrick is a regular contributor to NetworkHR magazine, where he writes specific articles focusing on improved efficiency in the workplace. His most recent article was titled "Introvert, Extrovert or Ambivert. Who should you hire this year?".

Patrick's Clients:

DAIMLER

Actuant

ASHLAND

Roland Berger
Strategy Consultants

VIVID
HOMES BY B&Q
SICE

